Infringements and sanctions

The ball is dropped again:

Ball kicked directly into the goal from a dropped ball counts a goal.

Key new Law change.

New text

Infringements and sanctions

The ball is dropped again:

If the ball enters the goal:

If a dropped ball is kicked directly into the opponents' goal, a goal kick is awarded

If a dropped ball is kicked directly into the team's own goal, a corner kick is awarded to the opposing team

Reason

There have been a number of occasions where goals have been scored from "uncontested" dropped balls. This has put a great deal of pressure on the referee as he has to allow the goal to stand. We then have the unseemly situation where the opposition allows the team to score from the kick-off without any players trying to stop them in order to rebalance the game.

Advice to Referees

Referees must clearly understand what was changed as regards dropped balls and what was not. It remains the case that the dropped ball restart must be retaken from the original location if, directly from the drop, the ball enters either goal with no player having made contact with the ball. The purpose and effect of this revision was to not allow a goal to be counted if, after the ball is in play after being dropped by the referee, a player kicks or otherwise plays the ball directly into a goal. If the ball enters the player's own goal, the restart is a corner kick; if it goes into the opposing team's goal, it is a goal kick. The change covers only those situations where the ball is played directly into a goal: if the play involves more than one action, it was not kicked "directly into" a goal and the goal would therefore be counted. Examples of this scenario would include (but are not limited to) a player receiving the ball from a drop and taking two or more touches on the ball before the ball goes into the net; or receiving the ball from a drop, flicking the ball up from the foot to the head, and then heading the ball into the net.
